Congratulations to our ADRD Scholars

The ADRD Summit 2019 offered a sponsored program that paid for the expenses of up 21 trainees located in North America to attend the Summit. These included graduate and medical students, postdoctoral trainees, medical residents, and other individuals pursuing advanced degrees/training that are relevant for dementia research. Awardees attended a March 13 welcome reception where they will meet other awardees and several members of the organizing committee, the full Summit, and will participated in a post-Summit debriefing teleconference. This program responded to Milestone MED FA1-3 from the ADRD Summit 2016.

Miguel Arce Rentería, Ph.D.
Columbia University Medical Center

Marius Tresor Chiasseu, Ph.D.
Yale University School of Medicine

Monica Coles, DNP, RN-BC, ACNS-BC
Carilion Roanoke Memorial Hospital

Adrianna De La Torre, B.S.
Dartmouth College

Umber Dube, B.Sc.
Washington University School of Medicine

David Gate, Ph.D.
Stanford University

Ashlyn G. Johnson, B.S.
Emory University

Jennifer Johnson, Ph.D.
Baylor College of Medicine

Christina D. King, Ph.D.
Vanderbilt University

Adam Martersteck, B.S.
Northwestern University

V. Eloesa McSorley, MPH
University of Chicago

Austin Nuckols, B.S.
Emory University

Kelly A. O'Malley, Ph.D.
VA Boston, New England GRECC
APSA Congressional Fellowship Program

Daniel Parker, MD

Duke University

Jessica Root, B.S
Emory University

Octavio A. Santos, Ph.D.
Mayo Clinic Florida

Kelsey R. Thomas, Ph.D.
University of California, San Diego
VA San Diego Healthcare System

Stephanie Torres, B.S.
University of Houston

Indira C. Turney, Ph.D.
Columbia University Medical Center

Kelly Young, B.A.
University of Michigan Medical School

Megan Zuelsdorff, Ph.D.
University of Wisconsin School of Medicine and Public Health